College Corner Siena College (Loudonville, New York)

Siena College is located in Loudonville, New York, just 10 minutes from the capital city of Albany. Siena offers 36 majors, and more than 80 minors to study in areas including the liberal arts, sciences, and business, among others. Students' academic experiences are customized and include everything from internships to research to service opportunities. Siena offers extensive study abroad programs and immersive service learning to allow students to adapt to the ever-changing global society. Siena understands the importance of life outside of the classroom. Between the 100+ clubs, including the American Red Cross and Quidditch Club, and spending time on the quad or attending Siena Fest, there is always something going on. There are also many ways to get involved with Christian Service, including participating in CRU, a Campus Ministry club. Siena College has 22 NCAA Division I teams and the Saints are powerhouses in men's and women's basketball, women's volleyball, and women's swimming. Siena also offers intramural/recreational sports, including flag football and volleyball.
